

MRS. BOOKER WINS IN SCENARIO CONTEST; GETS HERALD'S PRIZE

Her Story of "The Romance of El Paso" Will be Filmed and Sent Over the Countr of El Paso" Will Be Filmed Many Splendid Manuscripts Are Entered; Large List of Honorable Mentions in the Contest.

THE judges named by the chamber of commerce to pass upon the merits of the scenarios for moving picture films of El Paso submitted by El Paso writers and others living in nearby towns have awarded the prize of $25 offered by The El Paso Herald to Mrs. J. W. Booker, 429 Prospect avenue, El Paso, who check will be mailed Mrs. Booker today.

Nearly 100 scenarios were submitted and of these, in the neighborhood of 20 were found to be of such merit that the judges were compelled to weigh them in every known balance in which a moving picture scenario might be weighed.

During the process of elimination, the aid of experts in the moving picture field was called in. All agreed that from every point of view, the "story" around which Mrs. Booker's scenario was woven, contained the greatest heart interest and presented the greatest possibilities from a film producer's point of view at the same time retaining the possibility for advertising El Paso's resources, scenic effects and points of interest, which was the basic idea of the proposed picture from the viewpoint of the advertising committee of the chamber of commerce.

Some Especially Good Ones

The scenarios submitted by Miss Margaret Young, 128 Randolph street, P. A. Lottus, 745 Mills building, Mrs. E. L. Nichols, 415 Roberts-Banner building, and Mrs. J. L. Dyer, 1485 Arizona street, were all found to be particularly good and entitled to the highest consideration. Any one of them would be worthy of production and might have been selected by the judges for the purposes of the chamber of commerce, were it not for the fact that the basic story around which such a picture was considered by the judges as surpassed in the element of heart interest and in a measure, the dramatic possibilities, by Mrs. Booker's story.

Other splendid stories were submitted by Mabel Crowell James, E. P. D. No. 1, box 404, M. J. Preston, 1414 Montana street, E. W. Schauer, 114 South Kansas street, Frances C. Scott, 317 East Rio Grande street, and Robert W. Glass, box 462, El Paso. In the matter of careful preparation of scenario, it should be said that the palm should be awarded Mr. Glass.

To be filmed at once.

Mrs. Booker's story will be immediately placed in the hands of the producers with a view toward having the film made ready for exhibition purposes at the earliest possible moment. Since this movement was started three or four weeks ago, the chamber of commerce has had two specific requests from railroad companies for the descriptive of El Paso and its environs to be used by these railroad companies in advertising the advantages of the respective lines. This fact, taken together with the needs for film for advertising purposes throughout the farming districts of the north and east with a view toward attracting settlers to the lands in the irrigated valleys, makes it urgent that the film be made ready at the earliest possible moment.

L. J. Barrard, who will have charge of the production, will not act as general director of the picture, but will begin his work at once.

In addition to the scenarios submitted and mentioned above, the following should be given honorable mention: Mrs. James J. Longwell, 1119 Los Angeles street.

Mrs. A. Moody, 1407 East Overland street.

Miss Katherine L. Werrell, State School of Mines.

Miss Bertha Brewer, Canutillo, Texas.

Miss May Newell, Chihuahua, Mexico.

The Story That Will Advertise El Paso

FOLLOWING is a synopsis of the winning scenario submitted by Mrs. J. W. Booker, in the chamber of commerce scenario contest, winner of the $25 offered by The El Paso Herald:

Mr. Miller, a wealthy manufacturer of Minneapolis, Minn., interested in finding a winter home where the winters are not so rigorous, on his way from his office, buys a copy of The El Paso Herald. That night the family, after reading The Herald, decide to come to El Paso to investigate the climate. While discussing the trip, it develops that Mrs. Miller was born in El Paso and she tells Mr. Miller and their son, Bob, of some of her early recollections of that city. Her recollections are vague but she remembers that she and her sister, Mary, together with their parents and the members of another family, start from El Paso in covered wagons to go to some mine, which she barely remembers, having heard her father talk about them. They meet Indians and a fight ensues. Her sister, Mary, is carried away a captive, but all the others, including herself, are left for dead. Later some passing miners, hearing her cry for help, are attracted to the scene. They bury the dead and carry her back to El Paso. Later she is sent to an aunt in Minneapolis.

Years later she meets and marries Mr. Miller.

THE TRIP TO EL PASO.

The trip to El Paso is taken and they are so delighted with the climate that the family resolves to spend the winter there. They have become so enamored of the country and Mr. Miller finds such an attraction in the business possibilities afforded by the town, that he prolongs his stay. Among other friends made are a Mr. and Mrs. Minor. The Minors have a cottage at Clondorff and invite the Millers to spend the summer season at that resort.

During the summer they make an excursion to the Indian reservation and while there see a young girl who reminds them very much of someone they have known at home. The resemblance is so striking that all members of the family become very much interested. Bob Miller makes another excursion to the reservation. He finds the girl, discovers that she speaks English and learns that her name is Mary.

He returns to the Clondorff cottage, reveals his discovery to his mother, who rushes to her trunk and takes therefrom the only memento she has of her early life, a faded photograph of her sister Mary. Bob, upon looking at the photograph, calls attention to the striking resemblance and they return to the reservation.

THE WOMEN MEET.

The Indian girl tells her story as it was told to her by her mother, now dead. She proves to be Mrs. Miller's niece and also displays a photograph of her mother, which is a counterpart of the one which has been retained so long by Mrs. Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller invite Mary, who is now 18 years of age, and pure white in blood, as her father was a white trapper, who had left civilization to live with the Indians, to live with them and become their adopted daughter.

The Millers resolve to make El Paso their home and the education of Mary takes up much of their attention. During the early months of their residence in the city, the girl, who has never known anything but life in the wilderness of the White Mountains, as the word of the Indian captors of the mother, is shown the sights and scenes in and about El Paso. She is taken to its various industrial plants and to the El Paso, Butte dam, to Yaleta and Juarez as a means for giving her ocular demonstration of the advantages of civilization over those of savages.

Bob Miller falls in love with his adopted sister. Their engagement is announced and the story ends with their wedding.

RECORDS BEING PUT INTO LAW

Close Friend of Carranza Tells of Mexican Progress in a Social Way.

Dr. All, recognized by Constitutionalist allies as one of the influential thinkers for the government of Mexico, close to Gen. Venustiano Carranza himself, and "this" factor back of the reform program adopted by the Carranzista faction, today answered three leading questions, declaring that Carranza is not anti-foreign, that damages suffered by foreigners in Mexico will be indemnified to them upon presentation of proper proofs, and that social reform measures have already been put into execution in Constitutional territory.

Social Reforms.

Disregarding the social reforms to be put into force, he said: "It is not necessary for the government to get on a firm basis to begin the institution of reforms. Since the beginning of the revolution, many reforms have been instituted. In the state of Veracruz, for example, the persons who formerly earned 25 to 50 cents per day now earn three times as much. This has been fixed by decree of Gen. Aguilar and throughout the territory dominated by the Constitutionalists, a minimum wage scale has been fixed, resulting in unquestioned benefit to the workman. This will be augmented by the unification of all money issues.

Laws promulgated and providing for local self-government, municipal freedom from the central government, are already in operation. Freedom in local self-government will be the basis of the development of freedom of thought in larger matters throughout the nation. In the states of Tamaulipas, Veracruz and Puebla certain municipalities have already adopted the local self-government statutes and are making their own local matters.

"As soon as the congress can be brought together, which will be done some time about the middle of next year, the laws and decrees of the first chiefdom will be taken up and those that tend to carry out these laws will be incorporated into the statutes of the nation. Among those of great importance is that on labor and employment which is now being worked out."

Carranza and his party are still at Monterrey where much administrative business is being transacted.
